INTRODUCTION

In 1984, research and development librarian at New York University and, prior to that, director of the History of Economics Project at the University of Kansas, Ann E. Hagedorn, wrote the following introduction to Descriptive Catalog of the History of Economics Collection (1850-1930). This work put into printed form 10,000 machine-readable records created through federal Title II-C funding. Although dated and somewhat broader in scope than this limited microform edition of titles from the Economic History Collection at the University of Kansas, it aptly describes the evolution of what is probably the most formidable collection of post-1850 economic literature in North America. The selection of materials from the University of Kansas that comprise units three through six of Economic Literature, 1851-1900, consists of those titles that, after research on OCLC, were deemed sufficiently rare to warrant preservation and dissemination in microform. Readers of this essay should bear in mind that this overview describes the broader collection, which comprises pre-1851 titles and post-1900 titles. A further distinction should be drawn regarding this below described project. The 10,000 titles, for which records were created through Title II-C funding, currently reside in Watson Library. The remaining 8,000 or so titles for which there are no machine-readable records constitute the balance of titles from Professor Howey's purchase of the Crerar Library. Records for this latter portion of the collection, at present, exist solely as a catalog card set. The microform edition draws on both the Watson Library and Crerar Library titles. Those titles selected from the Crerar set for this microform collection have since received machine-readable catalog records prior to their filming.

In 1979 the University of Kansas (KU) was awarded a U.S. Department of Education grant under the Higher Education Act's Title 11-C "Strengthening Research Library Resources Program." The purpose of the grant was to catalog books and pamphlets in KU's history of economics collection, the outstanding resource in this country for the study of the history of economics between 1850 and 1936. Kenneth E. Carpenter, Research and Publications Librarian at Harvard University and former curator of Harvard's Kress Library of Business and Economics, has described these post-1850 resources as "unmatched elsewhere." As such, they are a valuable companion to those of the Kress Library, the nation's finest collection of pre-1851 imprints in the history of economics. The Title 11-C funds supported a staff of nine over a period of about two years. By late 1981, the staff had cataloged the 10,000 titles described in this Catalog.

Also in the late fall of 1981, the University of Kansas paid special tribute to Richard S. Howey, Professor Emeritus of Economics at KU, in recognition of his fiftieth year of building the history of economics collection. Howey became the Library representative for the Department of Economics in September of 1930. Library accession records for the early months of 1931 show the first purchases in the history of economics collection. Unfortunately, Howey's initial collection-building efforts coincided with the beginning of the darkest days in the 118-year history of the Library. The Library's book fund, which had supported the purchase of 10,000 volumes in 1930 was cut by 25 percent in 1932, and cut again in 1934 when purchases dipped to 5,000 volumes. This austere scenario continued until the post-World War II period. As a result, the economics collection had a slow start, increasing by an average of only a dozen or so titles per year.

During those years, Howey purchased several collections of individual authors--e.g., six books by A.C. Pigou, seven by J.A. Hobson, four by N.W. Senior—plus some reprints such as David Ricardo's Letter to T. R. Malthus. Early purchases also included some bank histories and three volumes of records from the Political Economy Club. Howey rarely paid more than $1.25 per volume and never issued want lists, which would have increased the price. His most expensive purchase in the thirties was Malthus' Definitions of Political Economy (1827) at $13.91.

In the 1950s, however, prosperity brought sweeping changes to the University of Kansas Library. Both the new Chancellor, Franklin Murphy, and the new Librarian, Robert Vosper, were bibliophiles committed to developing library collections. In Vosper's first year (1950), the Library acquired 59,000 volumes. Recognizing the significance of Howey's purchases in the past 20 years, Murphy and Vosper greatly increased the economics book budget. As a result, Howey's purchasing flourished on an unprecedented level. He began to acquire a hundred or more titles from a single catalog, sometimes the entire catalog and even entire collections. In February of 1953, he bought Moses Benzabat Amzalak's collection of 2,500 books and pamphlets on Portuguese economic thought. Two months later, Howey acquired Chicago's John Crerar Library of 12,000 titles (30,000 volumes) noted at the time to be the largest single purchase of economics books and periodicals in this country. This purchase included the private library (6,000 volumes) of American economist Richard T. Ely (1854-1943).

Soon Howey's economics purchasing zeal spread to other departments of the Library. For example, the Department of Special Collections acquired Italian renaissance banking records, East India Company records, 19th century farm diaries, French revolution estate papers, and other manuscripts relevant to the study of the history of economics.

But, as ephemeral as twisters in a Kansas spring, the golden days of the KU Library were merely a memory by the late 1960s. In the past fifteen years, Howey has continued to build the history of economics collection, assuming buying habits like those in the 1930s, that is, single purchases from only a few dealers. Fortunately, the great strength of the collection is by now well established due to Howey's earlier purchases.

The pre-1850 portion of the collection contains about 15,000 titles, including broadsides, acts, speeches, letters, pamphlets, books, and journals. Approximately forty percent of these are not represented in holdings of Harvard's Kress Library. The Howey collection includes twenty editions of J. B. Say's Traite and fourteen editions of his Catechisme, both thought to be the most complete set anywhere. Other noteworthy titles are David Hume's Political Discourses (five editions), Jeremy Bentham's Defense of Usury (six editions), Jane Marcet's Conversations on Political Economy (nine editions), and J. R. McCulloch's Principles of Political Economy (six editions).[2]

What is perhaps most noteworthy about the Kansas holdings, however, is the post-1850 portion of the collection which, including books, pamphlets, and periodicals, numbers approximately 18,000 titles. The Descriptive Catalog of the History of Economics Collection describes about 10,000 books and pamphlets selected from this portion of the collection by Professor Howey and James D. Neeley, Jr., Library Bibliographer for Economics and Reference Department Head at KU, and cataloged by the Title II-C funded staff. A subsequent grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities funded the processes of creating a subject thesaurus for the catalog, of editing the cataloging records, and of compiling the computer tape from which the pages of cataloging records were photocomposed.

The Catalog provides author, title, and subject access to the 10,000 titles. Here, the user will find exceptional holdings for well-known writers such as English economist William Stanley Jevons; Belgian economist Émile de Laveleye; Italian economist Achille Loria; American economists Henry Charles Carey and Edwin Seligman; German economists Franz Oppenheimer, Lujo Brentano, Adolf Wagner, and Eugen von Böhm-Bawerk; French economist Charles Gide; French economic journalist Paul Leroy-Beaulieu; German land reformer Adolf Damaschke; and numerous publications of the Cobden Club.

Among the unique features of the post-1850 collection is the large number of lesser-known and quite prolific writers such as Bernard Harms, Arturo Labriola, Sven Brisman, Albert Schäffle, Carl Jentsch, Henry Cernuschi, Charles Bradlaugh, Marie Willem Frederick Treub, Walter Rathenau, Henry Rawie, and Samuel Smiles. There are also the writings of approximately 60 women anarchists, economists, socialists, entrepreneurs, and labor organizers, including Annie Besant, Kate Morgenroth, Beatrice Webb, Rosa Luxembourg, Elizabeth Luzzatto, Jeanne Weill (pseudonym, Dick May), Olive Schreiner, Agnes Dyer Warbasse, and Laura C. Holloway.

Also unique is the large number of translations in the collection. These are entered in the catalog under the author's name (rather than the translator) and under the title of the original, if known. If the original is unknown, the work is listed under the title of the translation. When possible, the cataloger determined the original work on which a translation was based, following an often circuitous path of hints on title pages, in prefaces and in the descriptions of other libraries' holdings. The note section of the cataloging record describes a work as a translation only if the cataloger could definitely determine its origin. If there was doubt, the cataloger provided speculative notes concerning origin. These may be useful to scholars concerned with the evolution of ideas in the history of economics as they flowed from one culture to another via translations.

Although some of the translations are in English, most are in other languages. In fact, roughly 65 percent of the entire collection is in non-English languages. Kenneth E. Carpenter commented on the spectrum of languages represented in the collection:

Kansas and Kress are the two most international of the [great history of economics] collections. Only at Kress and Kansas, and at Minnesota (before 1800) can the researcher find much in languages other than English, French, and German. The Portuguese holdings are outstanding, perhaps better than in Kress, but there are also many books in the Scandinavian languages, in Italian and in Spanish not to be found elsewhere in this country.

Titles which span all of the languages include biographies, dictionaries, bio-bibliographies, yearbooks, dissertations, general treatises, book critiques, bibliographies, commemorative histories of organizations (commonly banks), festschriften, and textbooks...

This collection depicts a very broad interpretation of the history of economic thought and analysis. Recognizing that the collector greatly dictates the nature of any collection, one can readily observe Professor Howey's regard for the dictum that the process of tracing the development of economic ideas includes the general political and philosophical thought of a period. Still, the broad nature of the collection can be attributed partly to the expansive developments in economic theory and industrial activity in the latter half of the nineteenth and early part of the twentieth century. For example, the reaction against classical economic theory provided a fan-like spectrum of new theories. There were theories advocating government regulation for social reform, supporting nationalization of sectors of the economy, and favoring protection as opposed to free trade.

The following is a list of general topics which encompass many of the titles in this collection:

- Accounting
- Agriculture
- Banks and banking
- Business enterprises
- Commerce
- Cooperation
- Currency Question
- Economic classes (i.e. Poor, Wealthy)
- Economic conditions in approximately 80 countries
- European War, 1914-1918 (predominantly economic aspects)
- Events in economic history (e.g. strikes, conferences, treaties)
- Finance (e.g. Credit, Prices, Stocks, Loans, Savings)
- Free trade and protection issue
- Industry and trade
- Insurance
- Labor issues (e.g., Trade-unions, Hours of labor, Wages, Unemployment, Guilds, Strikes and lockouts, Industrial arbitration, Labor-management relations).
- Land (e.g. Land tenure, Land reform, Real property, Valuation)
- Laws and Legislation (i.e. texts of specific laws and legal aspects of the topics on this list)
- Political theories (e.g. Anarchism, Socialism, Communism, Bolshevism, Capitalism)
- Politics and government (in many jurisdictions including public administration on the local, state, and federal levels)
- Population issues (e.g. Malthusianism, Growth of cities, Birth control)
- Products (e.g. Cocoa, Coffee, Tea, Quinine, Cotton, Leather Goods, Grain)
- Railroads

- Taxation
- Women (predominantly in business, in the labor movement and women's rights)...

EDITORIAL NOTE

Economic Literature, 1851-1900: Publications from the Economic Literature Collection, filmed from the holdings of the University of Kansas comprises four units—units 3, 4, 5, and 6 of Economic Literature, 1851-1900, that contain, in toto, 200 reels. Each unit shall contain 50 reels respectively.

This collection guide describes the contents of unit 6 only. A cumulative guide shall be produced at the end of the microfilm project.

This guide provides an Author-Title Index and a Reel Index to unit 6. The Reel Index lists all titles in the order in which they appear on the reel. For this unit, that order is chronological by year, then alphabetical by country of publication, and finally by author.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The project would not have been possible without assistance from many individuals. Primary Source Microfilm wishes to thank Barbara Phoenix, project manager at Primary Source Microfilm, who oversaw and controlled for quality the contents of this collection and the records for this guide. Finally we wish to thank Richard Fyffe, Whitney Baker, Brian Baird, and Kent Miller of the University of Kansas for their guidance and assistance.
